

PUBLIC PRIVATE PARTNERSHIPS: DEVELOPER PANEL

Public private partnerships provide an excellent mechanism to bring innovation and improved operational efficiencies found in the private sector to produce badly-needed public facilities such as courthouses, civic centers, universities, and transportation projects. Many of these projects are being procured using Design-Build. The developers who have been involved in recent California projects, including civic center, student housing, mixed use, hospitality, aviation, courthouse, and more, will be here to present their insights. They'll share their forecast for the future, best practices, and how the AEC community can best contribute to P3 project success. Come and hear how economic diversification and collaborating with Design-Build can build value for all involved in the deal structure that's gaining traction: P3s.
